Mayer, Savery make charges

CARD claims city staff tried to sway public

PLEASANTON — Official documents show that the city staff has tried to manipulate the public so it would favor redevelopment, Citizens Against Re-Development charged yesterday.

Wally Mayer and Don Savery made the charges at a press conference which began at Mayer's downtown accounting office and wound up at city hall where a city official denied the charges.

Quoting from city staff memos which are public record, Mayer alleged that the city staff "led the Chamber of Commerce by the nose" on redevelopment. To prove his point, he pointed to a memo written April dated April 8, 1974, which says "Get the Chamber sold early on the benefits 1) minimize the opposition..."

The handwriting in the memo belonged to planning staffer Carol Jensen who no longer works for the city, said Director of Housing and Community Development John Bowling. The note simply was quoting the advice of Ralph Neal, redevelopment director for the city of San Rafael, said Bowling.

Bowling, Jensen and Planning Director Robert Harris met with the San Rafael redevelopment director to get information about establishing a redevelopment agency, said Bowling. The notes were a synopsis of that information, not a blueprint for action that Pleasanton felt it should adopt, Bowling stated.

Under the memo heading "pitfalls", Pleasanton learned that a school district might object to redevelopment because the agency would siphon revenues away from the schools. But an agency "can get around this by agreeing to pay back 3.8 percent increment", wrote Jensen. Her note continued that school and college districts "are the only ones that can be bought off."

Mayer took exception to the phrase "bought off", claiming it shows where the staff's thinking was at in dealing with other agencies Bowling said "bought off" apparently was Jensen's shorthand phrase meaning "reimbursed"

Mayer also charged that the staff was trying to mastermind a public relations campaign which would make it appear the public was crying out for redevelopment.

As evidence, he cited phrases from two documents. One was a letter from the city's redevelopment attorney, Joe Coomes of Sacramento, in a letter dated August 15, 1975, and the other a memo from city City Manager William Edgar dated September 5, 1975.

The Coomes letter gives the attorney's impressions of the August 11 redevelopment agency meeting which drew 150 angry critics of the plan. He advises Edgar: "Care should be taken in subsequent meetings to attempt to get members of the community to sponsor the proposed redevelopment plan as its proposal to the city council, so that the plan comes up in the context of a community proposal to the council rather than a city proposal to the community.

Three weeks later Edgar said basically the same thing to members of the city staff in a memo dated September 5 "It was concluded at the staff meeting (two weeks earlier) that if the plan were to be salvaged several objectives must be achieved: I) the proposed plan must be revised and TAKE ON THE IDEA that it is a plan WHICH HAS EMANATED FROM THE COMMUNITY AND PRESENTED TO THE COUNCIL rather than a plan prepared by the city and presented to the community." (Italics added)

Mayer contended the above statements are proof that the city staff was trying to fool the public into thinking a revised redevelopment plan was thought up by a group of citizens, and not the staff. What in fact happened, was that the city went to the Chamber with the staff's revisions and asked the Chamber to carry the ball, Mayer alleged.

Bowling denied that the staff was trying to camouflage its activities in presenting the plan or revising it. The city staff did indeed want to go out into the community and get as many citizens as possible "involved", said Bowling. The public ignored the formation of the agency in the summer of 1974, although it was publicized in the newspapers at the time. It was not until a year later, when property owners received registered letters notifying them of the proposed redevelopment plan that the public became involved in significant numbers, said Bowling.

Once the public did become involved, it accused the staff of fomenting the redevelopment plan, but the truth is that the public ignored its chance for early input, he said. And that's why the staff wants the plan to "take on the idea that it is a plan emanated from the community", said Bowling. "The staff wanted to get the public involved as much as possible."

Savery had a different view of the early days of the redevelopment agency. When it was formed, it had no content because it had not presented a plan. There was nothing for the public to get excited about, said Savery. The staff purposely kept a low profile for the redevelopment agency in those early days because it knew that the agency could be killed by a referendum only in the first 60 days of its existence, said Savery.

After the 60 day danger period passed, the staff cooked up its unsavory plan, said Savery. It's a pattern which has occurred all over California according to research done by Assemblyman Joseph Montoya, said Savery. Pleasanton's actions amount to a coverup, charged Savery.

Savery is looking at the facts from the perspective of hindsight, said Bowling. The staff had no bad intentions. It created the redevelopment agency in good faith and then drew up a plan. There was no intention to hide a thing, said Bowling.

The CARD leadership voted Tuesday night to retain an attorney to sue the city over the legality of the plan. There was no announcement about the grounds for the suit or the attorney to be retained.

Murray lower grades do well

DUBLIN— Murray School District second, third and sixth graders of last year generally performed within the state percentile range on reading, spelling and mathematics tests given statewide in 1974-75.

Second graders tested had a mean score on reading tests of 83.8 and ranked in the 95th percentile statewide. This means the mean second grade test score was better than 95 per cent of all other second graders tested statewide.

Third graders had a mean score of 89.3 on reading and a state percentile ranking of 81 (in a comparison score range of 63 to 90).

Mean scores of sixth graders ranged from 59.8 (district mean score) and 64th percentile statewide (somewhat below the comparison score range of 69 to 80) to 55.2 (district mean score) and 81st percentile (65-80 comparison score range) on spelling.

Sixth graders were well within the comparison range on written expression (73, district mean score; 68-79 range) (77, district mean score; 66-78 range).

According to a summary of the report released with the Murray breakdown, reading achivement scores for pupils in grades two and three have been improving steadily since the first statewide testing was conducted in 1966.

For the past several years, the scores of California pupils have exceeded national averages. The results for 1974-75 show that the level of performance was maintained in grade two and improved again in grade three.

The results were based on the second year in which the reading test had been used for grades two and three; this new test was constructed specificallyto assess the broad range of reading programs in California's public schools.

In grade two the average percent of questions answered correctly remained at67 per cent, and at gradethree it climbed from 80 to 81 per cent.

Pupils in grade six were administered a new test constructed as part of the revised California Assessment Program; the Survey of Basic skills: Grade 6.

Scores on the Comprehensive Tests of Basic Skills (CTBS) had been declining for several years, stabilized in 1973-74, and then registered a sharp upturn in 1974-75. All areas, reading, written expression, and mathematics, showed a four to six percentile rank increase. However, the scores for California students were slightly below national averages.

Reading was highest, with a percentile rank of 48; mathematics was next at 44, and language was lowest at 43.

Murray district trustees, after reviewing the state test results, then considered state school lunch program legislation.

The legislation, SB 120, concerning financing for school children nutrition, was signed by Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., on Oct. 1.

The bill would authorize use of override tax revenues to provide facilities and equipment for meals for needy pupils.

The bill requires, commencing July 1, 1977, that all school districts with grades 1-12 provide one free or reduced - price breakfast or lunch to each needy pupil.

Other sections of the legislation further definewhat a "needy pupil" is.

Judge orders AC Transit arbitration

OAKLAND — An Alameda County Superior Court Judge issued a restraining order against transit union officials late yesterday and ordered both the union and AC Transit officials into arbitration.

Judge Robert Bostick's move came less than 48 hours after Amalgamated Transit Union Local 192 representatives threatened to walk off the job in protest against alleged travel time irregularities in the two month old Fremont — Newark division.

The strike would have curtailed contract services between the Bay Area Rapid Transit District (BART) and AC Transit, thus stopping feeder bus runs to the valley.

The imbroglio began Monday night when union representatives told AC Transit their 92 drivers would strike early Tuesday morning unless the district agreed to pay time-and-a-half for a guaranteed 80 minutes travel from Seminary Boulevard in East Oakland to the Fremont — Newark division.

Judge George Phillips, Jr., was rousted from bed at 3:30 a.m , Tuesday, and ordered the appearance before judge Bostick.

Drivers have been paid time-and-a-half for the actual time spent taking the bus to its first stop and back to Seminary Boulevard from its last stop. The trips vary from 10 to 40 minutes each way.

AC Transit officials claim the union had not used "all collective bargaining vehicles available" nor complied with standard grievance procedures.

The union claims the contract was signed before the Sept. 8 division opened. They demand back pay to Sept. 8 on the 80 minute guarantee.

Amador district must dip into reserves

Deficit figures, ending balances and reflecting of teacher pay raises on October checks proved to be anything but a "lull" before an anticipated campus smoking legislation "storm" at Tuesday night's Amador district school board meeting.

Trustees were told by Doug Rose, assistant superintendent for fiscal services, that a $195,025 deficit figure had been submitted fro the county. The district, in effect, will have to dip into reserves for that amount, reducing its ending balance.

Board members also received a letter from the Amador Valley Secondary Educators Association (AVSEA), noting that the most recent salary increases had not been reflected in the October pay checks of certificated personnel.

Jack Delaney, board president, claimed responsibility for the oversight, saying a special meeting should have been called so that the raises could have been included in the checks.

Trustees also questioned several items on vouchers, which are presented to the board as a matter of course at each meeting.

Once clear of financial matters, trustees then sailed head long into the campus smoking legislation report. Following a review by Linda Alexander, a counselor at Amador Valley High and committee member, board members then debated whether to establish designated smoking areas at district campuses, maintain the current prohibition of smoking or withhold a decision pending a review of survey materials by absent board member Wally Decker.

As the discussion continued, it became apparent that trustees Geraldine Donaldson and Charles Beazley were opposed to striking present laws prohibiting smoking on high school campuses.

Lush woods and rolling farmland

Gentle welcome beckons at ranch for troubled youth

LIVERMORE — Just south of town, between the sprawling Del Valle Regional Park and the 400 acres of Sycamore Grove and Veterans Park, lies 70 acres of lush woods and gently rolling farmland.

The land nurtures acres of neglected walnut trees, a stream teeming with life, tall grasses and dusky thickets that are home to a wide variety of animals and birds.

There's a ranch for troubled youth on this out-of-town land that seems to have a gentle welcome for everyone. But the Buenas Vidas Youth Ranch only takes up a small part of the neglected acreage. The rest is beckoning for non-destructive use, appreciation, maybe even rehabilitation after 15 years of neglect by Alameda County government, the landlord.

It used to be Del Valle Sanitarium, in the 1920's through the fifties when tuberculosis was still a scourge. Then it was just a big, empty collection of simple but graceful buildings, setting for a Grade B horror movie three years ago and mostly a target for vandals.

Livermore teachers and citizens have been looking appreciatively at those old but sturdy buildings, set among vistas of Mt. Diablo and other spots that can be sighted from the hillsides.

An agriculture teacher, Ron Furtado of Livermore High, a science teacher, Roland Carlson of Granada High, and the district's child welfare and attendance supervisor, Mimi Werner, Tuesday night presented the school board with a vision of the Del Valle land as a community-wide environmental studies spot, a children's zoo and a real-life lab where future farmers could care for the walnut orchard.

Carlson captured his audience's imagination with gorgeous slides of Livermore high school students on field trips as part of their science courses. Exploring tidepools at Half Moon Bay, watching birds on Mt. Diablo, tramping through the stream at Vets park ... and, of course, doing the necessary preparing, recording and analysis back in the classroom.

Then — dissolve to interior of a building on the Del Valle property. Built-in bookcases, 6,000 square feet of space, sturdy construction except for a disintegrating roof, and sunlight pouring through windows that look out upon the wealth of wildlife "right in our own backyard."

What a perfect spot, he said, for a library and study center where students could meander into the countryside to study galls on oak trees or look for spider habitats, then come back into the building to do their book work.

The building could house special exhibits upstairs — maybe a room for rocks and fossils, and another for plant specimens. And it could be open to any local person to use for recreation or for serious scientific study.

The cost? "Private funds and donations," he hoped, would fix the roof, install tables and shelves and cabinets, repair broken windows. No monetary commitment was needed from the school board.

Next to speak was Furtado with plans for an agriculture class that would take students into the orchard. They would learn by practical experience how to prune, when to spray, what to use for fertilizer, how to harvest the 10 acres of walnuts.

Students would also learn how to run the farm equipment that would make up the program's biggest expense of about $16,000. Livermore's agricultural program is already one of the best in the state, said Furtado, and the new project would make it even more complete.

Mimi Werner, in a brief presentation, said she'd discovered that only half the local kindergarteners had even gone to a zoo. She thought a small local petting zoo, with farm animals, could go a long way in introducing children to science.

An obviously impressed school board unanimously accepted the team's detailed report, without committing themselves to the project.

"It sounds like an interesting project, if we can get it at little or no cost," trustee James McFarlane said cautiously.

Then he added, "I wholeheartedly support it. Years from now, maybe we'll look back and be glad we had the foresight to do something like this when we had the chance."

'So long, you old so-and-so!'

Dublin bids adieu to Barni

PLEASANTON — What do you say to a man who's devoted the past six years to working diligently through the Dublin Chamber of Commerce to improve the personal, business and civic life of the community?

Well ... You take him to lunch and roast him with lewd, ethnic jokes. You remind him of every faux pas and dum-dum-headed move he's ever made. And you make pernicious puns of his name while slurring his family tree.

Then you slap him on the back, kick him in the shin, stick a Teddy Bear in one hand and a plaque in the other and give him a standing ovation and your sincere thanks.

So fared Dublin's 1974 Man of the Year, Jules Barni, when roasted rare by the chamber of commerce at Wednesday's buffet luncheon at the Howard Johnson Motor Lodge.

The mild-mannered Jules, manager of the local Wells Fargo depository, has been transferred to San Leandro, and, like all cherished institutions, deserved and was rewarded with his roast.

Who would have believed that baritoned stalwart of sound financial planning would lock himself inside his bank one dark and stormy night?

Or impersonate a Times reporter to cull his picture with a statuesque beer and golf ball dispenser of the female persuasion?

"Keeping abreast of the news," roaster Gene Birk called it.

Only that fine bulwark of business would have volunteered a slumber party for prospective Dublin Maids.

Or pushed for Grand Opening festivities for Dublin's singular bawdy house.

He was the "jewel" in the belly dancer's navel. The Italian who overwound his self-winding watch. The only Wells Fargo manager to come to work in mis-matched shoes — and brag about a similar, second pair at home.

His picture was rejected by Playgirl magazine, but his strong back and big heart were more than welcome at chamber and Rotary Club fetes.

As roaster Joe Devane said: "We'll never get along without the family, Jules."

Parking enforcement aid coming

LIVERMORE — A new police assistant soon will be helping out on the parking enforcement beat and sometime next summer six new police patrol cars will be compact models.

The city council this week approved the hiring of a police assistant over a less expensive police cadet because an assistant could work more hours and help with parking enforcement and paperwork, explained Police Chief Ron Lindgren.

Lindgren's estimates showed a police cadet hired for a six-month period, or 624 hours, would cost $2,689 while an assistant for this same period would cost $5,905.

During budget study sessions in May, the council suggested the police department purchase compact cars for patrol purposes. According to City Manager Bill Parness, six are on order and should be delivered by late spring.

Although gas mileage is expected to increase by only four miles per gallon, said Parness, maintenance costs should be reduced more noticeably.

The city manager also informed the council that a state statute requiring officers to renew their first aide certificates and cardiac-pulmonary relief training each three years will cost the city about $6,000 in unbudgeted overtime.

Parness added he has a "personal belief" this money should be reimbursed through SB 90 provisions since the training is state ordered.

He is investigating the possibility of being paid back but noted the city may have to sustain the expense.

33 acres near Vasco-Naylor

Capitol Metals subdivision approved

LIVERMORE — A tentative parcel map to subdivide 33 acres of land southwest of the intersection of Vasco Road and Naylor Avenue into three industrial lots was recommended for approval by the planning commission Tuesday night.

Final action on the map must be taken by the city council.

The land to be subdivided is owned by the Capitol Metals Company, Inc., whose Northern California Division is located on Vasco Road. The company's map asked that the land be divided into parcels of 14 acres, nine acres, and 10 acres.

According to a company representative, Capitol Metals has no development of the land in mind.

The land lies within a district zoned for high intensity industry.

Commissioners also reviewed the Noise Element amendment to the city's General Plan at their meeting Tuesday night and referred the element back to committee for further clarification and latitude on single events.

The application of Noe Trevino to rezone from residential to business a site at the southwest corner of N. Livermore Avenue and Chestnut Street to permit construction of a convenience market was continued to February at the applicant's request.

In other business, the planning commission approved a conditional use permit to allow retail sales (lumber yard) by the 84 Lumber Company, located on the south side of First Street west of Trevarno Road, and continued to the first meeting in January a tentative parcel map submitted by David Madis for property at Trevarno Road.

In conjunction with the Trevarno Road map, commissioners in two weeks will continue to review the city's Heritage Site ordinance.

The chamber nominating committee will also holds it second and final meeting.

Pleasanton rec rejects lease on tennis courts

PLEASANTON — The Pleasanton Park and Recreation Commission rejected a staff proposal to lease four indoor tennis courts at the Alameda County Fairgrounds last night.

The vote was 3 to 2 with Commissioners Chuck Gielow, Ken Mercer and Ryan McKeon voting to reject the proposal and Jerry Wipfli and Hank Gomez dissenting.

Mercer led the objections to the lease, claiming it would compete against the private courts at Tennis Town.

Gielow said he could see both sides of the private enterprise verses government question, but felt the city may lose money on the $2,400-a-month lease if it did not get as much use as Recreation Director Bob Caparusso had forecast.

After the vote Gielow instructed Caparusso to lease two of the courts on a partime basis for tennis lessons given by the recreation department.

Alameda County Fair Manager Lee Hall said that the county will run the courts from January to May on a trial basis. Hall indicated he felt the county may be able to at least break even on the tennis courts by managing them itself now that it is evident the city won't be the operator.

Bob Molinari, a member of the Pleasanton Racquet Club, was the only member of the public to speak up at the special meeting. He felt the city should lease the indoor courts because it would introduce more people to tennis. If young people can learn tennis under ideal conditions they are more likely to stay with it, said Molinari.

Dagmar Fulton was honored as 'Woman of the Year' by the Pleasanton Jaycee Wives.

Hope, dedication, honesty expressed at dinner for 1975 Woman of the Year

By LILLY AULT

"What can I say but 'thank you.' " asked Dagmar Fulton upon learning she was selected as "Woman of The Year" during a luncheon held at the Pleasanton Hotel Saturday.

Dagmar did, however, go on to make a few more comments showing her wisdom, intelligence and honesty. "I'm a little embarrassed," she said, "sitting here and listening to a list of things I have done in my lifetime. You do these things because you believe in what you are doing. I became involved with activities as a child. We did things as a family. We talked to one another and listened and learned a lot. We were not categorized as baby, child adolscent, adult as done today. We were just people."

Dagmar ended her "thanks" by saying she hoped to continue being active for a long time. "Age is a condition of the mind," she said, "and the way my mind is, I intend to be around for quite awhile!"

Dr. Barbara Mertes, Dean, Chabot College, Valley Campus, who was guest speaker at the event was as bubbly, pert and dynamic as her presentation, "I A Woman."Dr. Mertes incorporated quotes, readings from books and poems into her presentation which was perfectly suited for the occassion and today's women.

"Today, perhaps more than ever," she said, "we as contemporary women have become more conscious of ourselves as humanistic beings and because we are honest, open and realistic, we have become more vulnerable to the hurt and disappointment that we see in the symbolic mirrors that reflect us as we are and not as we should like to be.

"Women have a need for recognition and a discovery of self. The old saying, 'We are stuck with what we are' doesn't hold up — rather we begin to build on what we know. Real growth and understanding can occur only after we begin to really see ourselves for what we are or that which we have become."

Tom, Dick or Harry Turkey — how to choose

Are you going to be the Thanksgiving cook this year? Does this make you a little nervous? Confused as to whether to buy a tom or hen, fresh or frozen, self-basting or regular turkey? Want to know the easiest way of roasting that proud bird to a golden hue?

Dr. A.W. Brant, a food science specialist at the University of California, has answers for you, and some good advice. "To avoid being nervous when you have to cook a special dinner, plan ahead. Get all the information, make all the decisions, and do as much of the shopping and preparation as far ahead as possible.

"And don't forget to remove the turkey from the freezer, or buy your frozen turkey several days before cooking day, to allow enough time for thawing!"

WHICH TURKEY IS BEST — TOM OR HEN, FRESH OR FROZEN?

The "best" turkey is one that suits the purpose you want. You need a young bird if you want it for roasting, frying, broiling or barbecuing, because it is tenderer than a mature one. Mature birds are suitable for stewing, baking or boiling. They need a moist heat. There are young toms and hens — fresh or frozen, and there are mature toms and hens — fresh or frozen. In choosing a turkey, consider age (class) and quality (grade). However, not all labels indicate whether it is a hen or tom.

Young toms although heavier than hens, are just as tender, juicy, and tasty as young hens. Hens usually cost more per pound.

A frozen turkey is often killed in its prime condition and then processed and frozen at once to keep it in top quality. Usually, frozen turkey costs less per pound than a fresh one.

Fresh turkeys are killed just before marketing, and must be kept under refrigeration until you are ready to use them (Use within two days after purchasing). They generally cost more per pound than frozen ones.

A shield-shaped label or tag attached to a turkey certifies that the turkey has been graded for quality by a technically trained government grader. The U.S. Department of Agriculture provides this "quality" grading service on a voluntary basis to poultry processors and others who request and pay a fee for it. When grading is done in cooperation with a state, the official grade-shield may include the words "Federal-State Graded." Grade A means that the birds are fully-fleshed, well-finished, and attractive in appearance. Grade B birds may be less attractive in finish and appearance, and slightly lacking in meatiness. Grade B is seldom printed on poultry labels.

Grade does not indicate how tender the bird is — it indicates quality only. Age (class) determines its tenderness. Mature turkeys may be labeled "mature turkey," "yearling turkey," or "old turkey."

ARE SELF-BASTING TURKEYS BETTER THAN REGULAR TURKEYS?

Since self-basting turkeys were put on the market, their popularity has increased considerably. Convenience is probably the main reason. You don't have to baste them They can be more moist, flavorful and tender than regular birds, but they cost more. It is up to you to decide.

Self-basting turkeys are usually U.S. Grade A birds — the best of the flock, so to speak. Processors inject them with a limited amount (now three percent) of basting solution, which is later released throughout the meat as the bird roasts. It improves the turkey's texture and flavor. The solutions range from straight butter to mixtures of oil and water in various proportions. Oils used are those normally found in margarine — cottonseed, soy, coconut or corn oil. The solutions may also contain turkey broth, plus added flavoring, moistening ingredients and antioxidant agents. The U.S. Department of Agriculture now approves the solutions under regulations for federally-inspected turkeys. Read labels carefully so you will know what you are buying.

According to U.S. Department of Agriculture figures, 15 percent of the nation's turkey crop was processed and marketed as self-basters in 1974. So, you might try one and see how you like it.

'16th century legislation'

Psychics attack proposed fortune-teller rules

By J. VanLandingham
Lesher News Bureau

MARTINEZ — "This is the 20th Century, but Contra Costa is still burning psychics and we want to know why," exclaimed one such psychic Tuesday.

Milton M. Ferris, executive director of the Esprit Foundation of Walnut Creek, warned he would join any class action suit against the county to "defeat this 16th century legislation."

Nevertheless, the proposed fortune-teller ordinance attacked by Ferris and others remained in the Board of Supervisors' Governmental Operations Committee for further study.

Committee Chairman Al Dias of San Pablo declined Tuesday to have the proposed ordinance, aimed at regulating fortune-tellers, introduced because he thought more study was needed.

Even the British Broadcasting Corp., was attracted to Tuesday's hearing that featured testimony from a number of individuals working in "psychic phenomena, or astral predictions."

A spokesman for the American Civil Liberties Union, Mt. Diablo Chapter, said the ordinance treated fortune-tellers like criminals.

"You pay a $350 fine and then you're put on probation," said Johnson Clark.

Clark was referring to the annual $350 license fee proposed in the draft ordinance.

Clark referred to Section 332 of the penal code which declares fradulent fortune-telling larceny, saying that was sufficient protection.

Staley Costello, a spokesman for the gypsies, asked that any ordinance require a three or four-year residency requirement to prevent "outlaw gypsies" from invading the county.

He also requested that no fortune-teller be allowed to establish a place of business within three miles of another.

Deputy County Counsel George McClure said the proposed ordinance has a two-year residency requirement, but he wasn't sure about the territorial limitations.

McClure earlier explained the proposed ordinance was drafted in response to requests to lower the license fees for fortune -tellers in the unincorporated areas.

What bothered critics Tuesday was the proposed ordinance's definition of fortune-telling.

Everything from crystal gazing and spirit contacting to card reading and palmistry, with a dash of clairvoyance, mysticism, and necromancy thrown in, is included in the definition.

All fortune-tellers or like characters must have a license which can be obtained after applying to the sheriff, having a background investigation and a full hearing before the Board of Supervisors.

Clark, after reading the lengthy definition, snorted and said, "Perhaps fortune-tellers should be required to post a sign as do cigarette makers, warning that there is no scientific evidence we can predict the future and perhaps stockbrokers should also post such a sign."

Knott said he has no Contra Costa clients, although he has been contacted by several interested parties.

Jeanne Borgen of Pinole said she would have to move out of the county if the ordinance passed in its present form.

The provision requiring posting an application for a license could stir up fear and mistrust by some of her uninformed neighbors, she said.

Lou Ann Dibble, also of Pinole, attacked the ordinance as a waste of taxpayers' money.

LAVWA board a no-show at Zone 7 meet

A meeting between the water committees of Zone 7 and Livermore - Amador Valley Water Management Agency failed to take place Wednesday due to "unfortunate" conflicts in LAVWA board members' schedules.

LAVWA had requested a meeting with the zone on Wednesday to coordinate water quality management planning in the valley, but failed to show up. LAVWA project director Daniel Murphy attended.

Murphy explained LAVWA board chairwoman Lila Euler had planned to be present, but was unavoidably detained interviewing prospective financial consultants. Other board members also had conflicts.

Euler called the incident "unfortunate" and added LAVWA had no intention of "standing-up the zone."

"I'm really sorry this had been billed as the valley - wide confrontation of the ages, which it really wasn't," said Euler.

She added, "I think we did accomplish our goal of setting up a mechanism for both agencies to meet together on a regular basis." She referred to the arrangement worked out Wednesday by Murphy and the zone under which staffs from each agency would meet bi-monthly to coordinate work.

Zone 7 and LAVWA are vying for Bay Area Sewage Services Agency (BASSA) designation as lead agency for water management planning of Alameda Creek watershed above Niles.

Each agency has argued it should be given lead designation ... Zone 7 director Harlan Zodtner acknowledged "a colossal lack of communication between the two groups."

Zone 7 director Richard Ryon said it was "frustrating" the two groups couldn't get together. "They've been saying we're hard to communicate with, and then they don't show at the meeting."

Ryan added the discussion with Murphy was "useful, but it's not the same as talking with board members."

Directors Ryon and Zodtner acknowledged LAVWA's fear that Zone 7 would get involved in the "sewer business."

"I drew up a resolution saying the zone wouldn't become a sewage agency, but without LAVWA there to say what they think, we can't get things off the ground," said Ryon.

Zodtner said the zone is willing to work with LAVWA on water management planning. "I think it can be done without interfering with LAVWA's charter. That's one of the reasons we wanted to sit down with LAVWA and work out these details."

Zodtner said LAVWA's actions, however, "are beginning to say they don't want to talk to us."

Zodtner backed off from his Wednesday stand that BASSA should be informed of LAVWA's failure to attend the joint meeting.

"I think it would be well for BASSA to know this, but I'm not certain it would be appropriate to include in my presentation."

BASSA received testimony from LAVWA and Zone 7 of the Alameda Creek Flood Control and Water Conservation District Wednesday night.

Glad coach fears WV

Chabot soccer mentor John Shaw feels his team will have to play its best game of the season when the Gladiators host West Valley College at 1 pm Saturday for the Northern California Community College championship.

"We have to stop their great forward line," Shaw said yesterday. "They have an All-American line left wing in Al Gaspar. He made the All-American squad as a freshman last season and has been nominated again this season."

West Valley os coming off an impressive 3-1 victory over Canada, the top-ranked community college in the state. The Gladiators fought past Skyline College 3-1 Saturday in Hayward.

"West Valley is a much better squad than Skyline," Shaw said. "They have improved greatly since the begining of the season. They totally dominated Canada. What makes their victory so impressive is the fact they won on Canada's home field and that is almost impossible to do."

West Valley finished second in the Golden Gate Conference race with a 8-4 record. Chabot won the conference championship with a 10-2 mark but West Valley gained a split with the Gladiators in their two matches this season.

"They also have a fine fullback in Rick Lopez," Shaw said. "They are really a fine well-balanced club, the best we will meet this year."

The winner of the Chabot-West Valley contest will meet East Los Angeles College for the state championship.

However, Shaw is not thinking about that match yet.

"We have to be ready for West Valley. We're not really thinking about East LA yet," he said.

The Gladiators tied with East LA for the state crown last year and are anxious to gain another shot at the southern squad.

Chabot is led by All-American goaltender Steve Hector. Hector had one of his better matches Saturday against Skyline and has been consistent all season.

There will be a opening ceremonies at 12:45 pm Saturday before the West valley-Chabot match begins

Matador grid foe 6th in state poll

If one goes by various prep football polls it is hard to see how Granada's Matadors have any chance at all against powerful Mission San Jose in the North Coast Section 4-A playoff opener tomorrow night in Fremont.

Mission San Jose is ranked first in the East Bay Prep Writers poll and sixth - statewide by a San Francisco poll. The Warriors are ranked first in the greater Bay Area and third in Northern California by the San Francisco poll.

However, polls are not always the most accurate measure of football talent so perhaps there is hope for the Matadors after all.

Amador head coach Fred Wood feels Mission San Jose was the best team his squad played all year but admits his team's loss to the Warriors came in the early pre-league season when his squad was still building the East Bay Athletic League race."

They are a very physical ball club," Wood said of the Warriors. "They have some big running backs and a big line. They don't offer any deception on offense. They just come right at you. Granada has a much more deceptive attack."

Wood also felt the fact Mission San Jose is without its first string quarterback could have a bearing on the outcome of the playoffs.

First-stringer Kelly Turner was injured several weeks ago and is not expected back for the playoffs The second - string quarterback quit the team so it is up to reserve Greg Sullivan to lead the Warriors.

"It's hard to say who should be favored in the playoffs because of their (Mission San Jose) quarterback situation," said Wood. "I will say that if they had their first - string quarterback they should be favored for the playoff crown."

Dublin coach Wayne Re has a similar opinion of the Mission San Jose team.

His Gaels took a 47-7 defeat at the hands of the Warriors in early season play.

"They like to run, no question about that," he said. "They only threw one pass against us but with those big running backs they didn't have to pass much."

Re said the Warriors also have a large mobile line which gives their huge running backs, Sean Sullivan and Kevin Turner, a chance to run through the opposition.

Re admits he has not seen Pinole Valley and Clayton Valley play but says they would have a hard time stopping the powerful running of Sullivan and Turner.

As for Granada's chances against the Warriors.

"Granada will have to stop Sullivan from running up the middle and Turner from going outside," he said. "In other words, Granada has a chance if they can force Mission San Jose to do things they are not used to doing."

Expansion teams get break

NEW YORK (AP) — National Football League owners agreed Wednesday to permit the new Tampa Bay Buccaneers and Seattle Seahawks franchises to stock their teams with players from both the active and reserve pools, creating the largest selection of football talent for any expansion teams in NFL history.

"We have created the largest pool of quality players ever available in football expansion," said NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

The new teams are scheduled to begin play in the 1976 season.

Rozelle outlined the stocking plan this way:

All teams will be permitted to withhold two players from their total reserve lists as of Oct. 28. This lists include injured players, retired players, players now performing in Canada and other categories.

In addition, the teams will freeze 30 other players before the Buccaneers and Seahawks start picking.

Each existing team is subject to the loss of three players and may protect another player each time it loses one.

In the college draft, Seattle and Tampa Bay will alternate first and second choices in each of the 17 rounds. In addition the two new teams will get extra picks at the end of the second, third, fourth and fifth rounds.

"After the start of the sixth round, the two new teams will have made 28 of the first 158 draft choices or 18 per cent," said Rozelle.

Tampa Bay and Seattle will each receive 39 veterans and 25 players from the college draft for a total of 64 on their roster. "They also will be signing free agents, waiver claims and other players," said Rozelle.

The commissioner said certain aspects of Wednesday's agreement would be subject to collective bargaining between the NFL Management Council—the owners' bargaining agent—and the NFL Players Association.

John Thompson, general manager of the Seattle team and former executive director of the Management Council, explained that negotiations problem.

"The decision to expand, in management's view, is not negotiable," he said. "But everything affecting the employes is negotiable. Ostensibly, all of this is subject to negotiations with the players."

Rozelle said the decision to include players on reserve had created the huge pool of talent. "Cincinnati's pool was 88 players and there were 154 availabale to Atlanta and New Orleans," the commissioner said, citing the stocking of the NFL's most recent additions.

An important aspect of the plan is the availability of players currently on injured reserve in the NFL. There are 139 players currently on that list and, with five weeks left in the season, more are likely to be added.

Dorsett 'back of week'

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Tony Dorsett has a simple explanation for his recent artistry on the football field. "I'd pick up the papers and see where Archie (Griffin) was getting his 100 every week, and Joe Washington was breaking them at Oklahoma and Rick Bell was having an incredible year at USC, and I said to myself, 'Hey, man, you're as good as these dudes but you're gonna have to bust out real soon or they're going to leave you behind.'"

Nobody is leaving Dorsett behind these days.

The University of Pittsburgh running back has had his act together for almost three full years now—and in recent games he has been outstanding.

For his performance against Notre Dame Saturday, in which he rushed for 303 yards, Dorsett was named The Associated Press Back of the Week for the second time this season.

Hayward star honored

Despite a winless season, Cal-State Hayward's football team gained some consolation this week when Pioneer lineman Greg Blankenship won the Northern California Football Writers and Broadcasters College - Division Defensive Player of the year award.

Blankenship, who won the same award in the 1973 season, was the sole bright spot for a Pioneer team that was generally outclassed this season. The Pioneers concluded their Far Western Conference season Saturday with a 15-0 loss at the hands of Sacramento State. The Pioneers' seasonal record was 0-10.

Other top awards went to Chuck Muncie of California, University - division player of the year, San Jose State defensive end Kim Bokamper, University - Division Defensive Player, and Santa Clara quarterback Kaipo Spencer, College - Division Offensive Player of the year. San Jose State coach Darryl Rogers was named Northern California Coach of the year by the sportwriters.

Girls soccer

The Pleasanton Girls Soccer Association will have a one - time only soccer sign-up for spring season. The sign-up will be held in the recreation center at Val Vista Park from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Dec. 6.

The yellow sheets parents filled out at the conclusion of the Autumn season do not constitute a registration for the Spring season. Those sheets were for survey purposes only.

Dons open season

Amador High School opens its 1975-76 soccer season with a home match against Moreau of Hayward at 7 pm Friday.

Amador, 7-6-3 last season, will be meeting one of the Catholic League's powerhouses in Moreau. Moreau usually finishes second or first in the CAL.

Amador is a young, inexperienced team this year with just five players returning from last season's squad of 23. To make matters worse, two Amdor players, David Norton and Joe Corria, might miss the opener because of injuries. Corria a freshman, has a pinched nerve.

A junior varsity match will preceed the varsity contest, starting at 5 pm Both matches will be played at the Amador football stadium.

Life-long dream: Hayden goes to Hollywood

By RON McNICOLL

Bill Hayden of Livermore is not a starry-eyed kid anymore, but after 40 years he is finally going to consummate his love affair with Hollywood.

The man who opened the Vine Theatre in Livermore saw Gone with The Wind 400 consecutive times, and used to skip Sunday school in Woodland, Calif., to sneak next door and help the projectionist at the town's only movie theatre, is starting a movie company of his own in Hollywood.

But it's not goodbye to the valley, he told a Times reporter yesterday. He and his wife, Barbara, will maintain their Livermore residence while Bill becomes the champion long-distance commuter of the Livermore-Amador valley. He will stay with two of his daughters in Los Angeles while getting the firm established and fly back to Livermore on weekends.

Hayden's old comrades in Cask and Mask, the local dramatic group he helped found in 1957, are already letting him know how good they would look on film, but his new venture won't be that simple.

Hayden won't be producing films himself, at least not at first. He will he reading scripts for television shows and movies, picking the ones he thinks will be commercial successes, and forwarding them to production companies. In effect, his firm will be acting as an agency to spot the best script talent available.

He has dreams beyond that. He would like to buy a nice movie theatre somewhere in Los Angeles and run a mixture of the latest commercial successes with some of the fine old pre-1940 films he adores. He has an impressive collection of old films himself, especially the classic Charlie Chaplain, Buster Keaton and W.C. Fields films. A production company of his own to make a few films is a glimmer in his eye, too.

With many television script writers complaining about the lack of work these days, isn't it a poor time to be starting a film company, we asked Hayden.

"It's ALWAYS a low stroke on the cycle in Hollywood," he said. "That's been the syndrome in Hollywood, in the silent era and the sound era. The industry is always at the nadir." But Hollywood still is a big jump for anyone to take and Hayden feels that at age 57 he is finally ready for it.

"At my age I am finally getting to do something I have put off for 40 years. Because of circumstances I did not have the guts and the gall to do it. It's an entirely different lifestyle than I have been living. I spent all these years to establish a base to do it, not a financial base because my partner has the money, but an emotional base. "I put my nose to the grindstone and developed from it a certain maturity in my lifestyle. I can focus better now. Just by sheer survival, I have learned how to do that. I have learned to live on a creative plane and a practical plane and keep the two together. You cannot have fantastic ideas and nothing practical to support it, it won't work. And on the other hand, you don't want to pour money into a lousy idea."

Hayden caught his Hollywood fever young. As a boy growing up on a farm near Woodland, he would walk the five miles into town to see a silent film twice each week. Sometimes he had to sneak out to do it and his parents thought up the ultimate punishment for it — no scoldings, no thrashings, just the perfect psychological touch. They came into town and picked him up at the theatre when the bill was about half-finished.

After high school, Hayden spent a year in drama and English at UC Berkeley, then went to work for a West Coast film distributor who was concerned about maintaining the quality of the prints for a brand new epic, "Gone With The Wind." The distributor sent Hayden up and down the northern California coast to watch 400 performances (at four hours each) over six months. Recalling it today, he notes that GWTW was NOT his favorite movie — ("Wuthering Heights" is his favorite talkie, "Broken Blossoms" his favorite silent flick).

Hayden joined the army in 1941, before Pearl Harbor, with a little extra encouragement from the fact that he had the second highest draft number in the nation. He volunteered thinking he would do a one year stint, and before he knew it, he had spent more than four years in the service including duty with the old horse-drawn artillery.

Perhaps his most shining moment for Uncle Sam came when he was assigned to recruiting GI's in the Midwest. He wrote a little skit, a touching portrayal of a planeload of recruits dying in a crash with their souls living on in nobility, crusading for the war effort. Of course, the army didn't waste any time transferring him, missing the literary merits of recruits in heaven and picking up instead on the Air Force's failure to keep its own planes in the air.

After the war Hayden spent some time in Los Angeles and set out to become the World's Greatest Actor. He studied at an acting school founded by famed German director Max Reinhardt and gained some local fame as Lenny in "Of Mice and Men" ("Tell m-m-me ab-b-b-bout the r-r-rabbits, George").

The role got him up to 240 pounds on a diet of double malts, beer and four hamburger dinners, a necessary rise from his normal 175 pounds to play the massive Lenny. Unfortunately, he never regained his former weight, but the Lenny role did lead to his first and only film audition.

Character Actor Laird Creger had died and Columbia Pictures was looking for a replacement. Hayden got the call because he was big like Creger. Hayden did a moving rendition of Edgar Allen Poe's "Tell-Tale Heart" for director Frank Wisebar. The director complimented him on his performance, learned where he got his wonderful tryout piece and never called Hayden back. But for the next 15 years Wisebar had every actor tryout with that piece from "Tell-Tale Heart." He even did a television production of "Tell-Tale Heart" for Fireside Theatre, with not even a thank-you, Hayden recalls ruefully.

Hayden came to the valley in 1956 to open the Vine Theatre on Christmas Day. He was transferred to Pacifica a year later, didn't like the switch, and quit to move back to Livermore. John Edmands, publisher of the Pleasanton Times, had enjoyed Hayden's ad layouts when he was at the Vine Theatre and asked him to become the Times' first advertising director. Hayden took the job with the understanding he'd only be at the Times awhile before he moved on to something else. That was 16 years ago and now he is moving on to to something else.

inside the arts

SETTING THE SCENE

Bill Hayden

In 1959 when it all began, I never imagined there would be 1000 weekly columns devoted to theatre, film and assorted local arts.

All things, good and bad, come to an end and this is swan song for 'Setting the Scene.' It has been a lot of fun and headache trying to comment on the progress of the muse in this valley. Certain individuals have been cheered and others completely turned off by my comments. Not one word, however, was ever intended to be anything but constructive.

It has always been my aim to improve any theatrical enterprise — even my own. As I move to another phase of the performing arts, I'd like everyone who has been so kind as to express an interest in my commentary to know it was greatly appreciated.

Although there are no plans to terminate my two-decade love affair with this valley, I will be 'on-the-road' more and less in evidence along the local strand. Everything else remains the same. The only thing changed is the name of the game.

In looking back over the years, I have many fond recollections of 'great moments' of local theatre. Any performance by Joan Boer has to stand out in memory and it was a special pleasure being able to share the stage with her in "The Skin of our Teeth" last winter.

Another 'star' who must be mentioned is Connie Duke who worked in so many facets of Cask and Mask over the years but whose winning role of Birdie in "The Little Foxes" set a standard for anyone else ever attempting the character.

Other bright moments would include Virginia Gregory in "The Bat," Doris Barck in "Arsenic and Old Lace," Garret Boer as Danny in "Night Must Fall," Mary Rosten in "Payment Deferred," Barbara McClure in "The Cat and the Canary" and Joe Castro in "The Mikado."

I'm sure there are many who deserve a final word of praise, but this aging mind doesn't always respond when a recollection is required. It is important to point out, however, many very special performances were available to valley theatregoers through the work of Cask and Mask. Over the years, I was involved in 17 productions by the group and ended up with the unique position of having to avoid reviewing my own work.

One of the great funny stories (although at the time it was something less than hysterical) has to be a review of "Angel Street" in 1957.

At the time, I was manager of the Vine Theatre and not involved in any way with the 'press.' A great ad-gal on the old Livermore Herald staff named Lillian Weddington was assigned by Maitland Henry to review the play. Lillian, who was handling the Vine Theatre account asked me how to write a review. I laid out the format by coming up with the most negative, repulsive put-down of the play which I hadn't even seen. It was my idea she would use the thing as an outline for her own 'positive' version.

Good old Lil didn't bother to write a review of her own. She just published mine under a WRH by-line. Proverbial Hades broke loose. Eighteen years later I hear an occasional grumble about the disaster. Lillian left town and I was left with egg on the face.

Two things I've learned in 20 years. Don't write anyone else's review and don't review a high school production from a professional standpoint even if that's what they claim they're striving for. Minor points, in fact, but the only legacy I can pass on to a successor that might have any meaning.

Whatever my future in 'theatre' has to offer, I am very grateful for these years of opportunity here.

My wish for all involved in the arts is that one day there will be a proper facility here to perform in and that a new generation of theatre-oriented people will come along to transfuse some new and exciting blood into the existing anemia. My age of wunderkinder has past. Let youth have its day.

Ergo, ave et atque. It's Ars gratia artis from now on. I can sit out front in the future and enjoy a show without having to analyze the pleasure away.

"Greed is a terrible thing," remarked East as he watched his opponents chalk up that doubled slam.

"South could always make it," remarked West half-heartedly.

After West's double and his first look at dummy, South decided that the double could only be based on both major-suit kings. In that case the finesses were sure to lose and the normal play of taking those two finesses would lead to defeat.

Then South saw a way to end play West, if he held exactly two trumps and at least three clubs and three diamonds.

He took his queen of diamonds, ace of hearts and queen of clubs. Then he led a club to dummy's king and cashed the ace-king of diamonds and king of clubs. Now he led and ruffed the last club.

West saw that it was hopeless to overruff and discarded a diamond whereupon South simply threw him in with the king of trumps. He was caught in the same end play.

Ask the Jacobys

An Alabama reader wants to know how the impossible slam made in a recent article. The contract was six spades. South had lost a trick and led the queen of spades from Q 9 8 5 toward dummy's A 7 6 4 3. West got brilliant, played the deuce from king-deuce and there it was. The gremlins had cut a few words out of the article.

How much will SRV lose in school plans?

DANVILLE — The San Ramon Valley schools chief is taking a wait-and-see attitude toward a neighboring district's plan to gobble up part of his district.

Superintendent Allan Petersdorf said he's waiting for word on just how much of his district is to be included in the Walnut Creek Elementary School District's unification plans.

It could mean a loss of up to 15 per cent of the SRV district's assessed valuation and add up to 25 cents per $100 assessed valuation to property tax bills.

Dr. Elmo Guilieri, Walnut Creek school superintendent, said he expects to know next week where the southern boundary will be.

"It's premature to guess now," Dr. Guilieri said.

Dr. Guilieri said the University of California Field Service is studying where the boundaries should be for the proposed enlarged district, which would include intermediate and high school levels.

Walnut Creek's city boundaries had been considered for school boundaries, but "they're very jagged and have no semblance of order," Dr. Guilieri said.

"Now we're looking at the (Walnut Creek) sphere of influence," he added.

Petersdorf said there's some question where the spheres of influence are.

"It could be a half-mile, mile or a foot" into the San Ramon Valley district, he said.

"We really don't know. Until we get the discrepancies cleared up, I'm at a loss to comment," Petersdorf said.

This much he knows, however: if part of the San Ramon Valley district is lost, it will mean a difference in how much money the district has to operate because of lost taxes .

If Lavorna Estates is taken out of the San Ramon Valley district, it could mean a loss of 15 per cent of the assessed valuation of the district.

Two years ago persons from the Livorna Estates area asked to be put into the Walnut Creek school district, but were turned down.

The Walnut Creek district, with about 3,500 students, has been losing students while other districts, such as the San Ramon Valley, have been steadily gaining pupils.

If the Walnut Creek school district's plan is approved by voters, it would also take chunks of the Mt. Diablo, Lafayette and Acalanes school districts.

To put the proposal before the voters, Walnut Creek has to go before the Contra Costa County Board of Education and State Board of Education.

A simple majority is all that is needed to approve unification.

Slide show scheduled in library

LIVERMORE — The public is invited to a slide show of Livermore "as it was and as it has been changed," 8 o'clock tonight in the public library meeting room.

Jolene (Mrs. Dave) Abrahams, co-chairperson of the Livermore Bicentennial Organization Publicity Committee, will give the presentation as part of the on-going ATU Bicentennial observance.

As part of its Bicentennial program, the American Taxpayers' Union has presented local historian Janet Newton who gave the De Anza slide program. Mrs. Newton also autographed copies of her pamphlet, "The Anza Expeditions to Alta California."

ATU also presented a bicentennial flag to St. Michael's School, in honor of Monsignor Robert Adams' investiture as an honorary prelate.

The program to be given by Mrs. Abrahams culminates the trilogy planned for public observance of our country's birthday by ATU.

The committee is headed by Mrs. K.L. Richardson and includes Barbara Rees Enos, Cecelia Larsen, Loretta Terry and John Halyak.

Victim identified in Alamo slaying

Lesher News Bureau

MARTINEZ — Although coroner's deputies still haven't reached an Alamo slaying victim's family, a tentative identification has been made.

Fire officials said the victim as Robert Laurence, 36, of 946 Escondido Court, Alamo, where he was killed shortly after 1 a.m. Tuesday.

Sheriff's investigators said Laurence was killed, allegedly by a shotgun blast fired by Edward DeGardi, 31, also of the Escondido Court address.

Investigators said DeGardi, was in the house with Laurence's ex-girl friend, Carol Ann Thal, 35, of the same address when they heard a prowler.

They called the sheriff's office and reported a prowler, deputies said.

Then Laurence entered the house and advanced on DeGardi, who told invetsigators he warned the unarmed intruder to stop or leave. When Laurence failed to halt or leave, DeGardi said, he shot him, investigators reported.

Investigation of the shooting is continuing, although no arrests have been made.

Several neighbors called the sheriff's office just prior to the shooting, which was reported by Miss Thal, investigators said.

They played with the electric trains, the toy trucks, the balls and the bats. You name it.

EarlyTimes.

In the Clanton clan, it's the gift that separates the men... from the toys.

Early Times. To know us is to love us.
